Major Scott interposed no objection whatconvexed in annual session yesterday at noon in the room of the President of the Atlantic Coast-Line in the Byrd-Street station.

There were present Messrs. Edward Y. Cannon, Charles Ellis, Powhatan Ellis, William Allison, James H. Dooley, E. Moncure Hobinson, Jr., E. T. D. Myers, J. P. Brinton, F. R. Scott, John L. Williams, John R. Baylor, Mr. Lucke, Major J. H. Kelley of Frederfexsburg, Colonel Hillary Jones of Hanover, and George A. Haynes, Esq., of Rebmond—the three last named representing the State of Virginia.

Major Scott interposed no objection whatever to the rand, be the other hand, be thought the request entirely reasonable. But he desired to call attention to the fact that this resolution was not mandatory, but left the matter optional with the directors, who would guard every interest involved. He spoke of the need and value of the connection, of the trouble now experienced by this and the Richmond and Petersburg business-men's meeting—began in the Music Hail. After the auditorium was well filled in marched those who were to sit on the stage—the officers of the Exposition and its committees, and a representative number of meeting adjourned for an boar.

Hacks AND Wagons.
One of the directions in which the Exposition has contributed to those of our people most needy perhaps is seen in the statement which has been carefully made up, from which we gather that there has been paid to the drivers of the passenger-wagons (which have piled up and down Broad street to the Exposition-Grounds, exclusive of the railroad trains and a large number of heaks) a sum somewhat in excess of $35,-000. The same amount of money could not have been distributed in a channel where more direct and immediate good could have been enjoyed.

Now, my friends, the Exposition is about over. I have done the best I could with no exportence in this character of work. Had I the same task to perform again there are many things which I would handle differently. Doubless many have had reason for taking exception to some of my methods and conclusions. I could harrily have been otherwise. But I believe all will give me credit for honesty of purpose. With an eye single to the good of my city and State I have done in my humble way the best I knew how, and if perchance I have been the instrument of moving this people one step forward I thank God for it. Such a consciousness is next to that satisfaction of serving Him who gave me life. the following is a well-merited compliment:

Henry C. Jones, Esc., Director-General:

Dear Sir.—We, the undersigned commissioners of the counties represented at the Exposition, most respectfully beg leave to tender to you our sincere thanks for the uniform courtesy extended to us by yourself, and the officers and employees under your supervision, and for the material aid rendered in arranging and caring for our several displays during the Exposition, feeling that much of the success attending our efforts has been due to your wise counsels.

Assuring you of our highest regard, we have the honor to be, your obedient servants.
